What to Look Out for at www.bbc.co.uk/languages

John Cleese: "Learning a language makes our minds stronger and more flexible."

1. Get better at listening
2. Holiday phrases to download to your mp3 player
3. Lost for words - holiday blunders
4. French news - new report
5. Languages on TV - Learning Zone and BBC Four

1. Get better at listening

Off on holiday somewhere nice? Prepare yourself for the speed of people speaking in their own language! Learn how to apply the same listening skills you use every day in your mother tongue. <http://www.bbc.co.uk/languages/listening/index.shtml>

Read other learners' tips and send us yours.

http://www.bbc.co.uk/languages/yoursay/speaking\_and\_listening.shtml

2. Holiday phrases to download to your mp3 player

Your mobile phrasebook - simply print the phrases, download the mp3 files and go! So far we're offering downloads in 6 languages, but we are intending to add other languages in the future. <http://www.bbc.co.uk/languages/other/quickfix/index.shtml>

3. Lost for words - holiday blunders

Learning a language is all about diving in and having a go. But sometimes our attempts to impress the locals don't go according to plan. Read other people's stories and send us yours.

http://www.bbc.co.uk/languages/yoursay/lost\_for\_words.shtml

4. French news - new report

We offer a monthly supplement in French for people who already know some of the language. This month, our French report looks at Parisians' reactions to Paris's failure to host the 2012 games. <http://www.bbc.co.uk/languages/french/news/index.shtml>

5. BBC Four

Onion Street – Foreign Exchange

Ever thought about taking part in a foreign exchange to improve your pupils' language skills and make new friends? Find out the best way to set the wheels in motion and read about the experiences of other students at

<http://www.bbc.co.uk/schools/communities/onionstreet/advice/>

Call for Language Question in Population Census

There is currently no official source giving a detailed breakdown of the languages spoken in the UK. CILT, the National Centre for Languages is calling for a languages question to be included in the Population Census 2011 to fill this critical information gap.

The data would be hugely beneficial for:

- more efficient provision of a wide range of public services
- understanding the needs of local communities and promoting social inclusion
- more resourceful targeting of language support resources
- public acknowledgement of the cultural and linguistic richness of our society

To this end CILT has submitted a response to the consultation paper, which can be viewed on-line at www.cilt.org.uk/faqs/langspoken.htm.

Institute of Linguists Receives Royal Charter

The Institute of Linguists has this month been granted a royal charter and from 1 September 2005 will become the Chartered Institute of Linguists. Chartered status will help improve standards and regulation for all professional linguists, which in turn will benefit clients and end-users. The charter also means that in the near future the new Chartered Institute will be in a position to confer the status of 'Chartered Linguist' upon suitably qualified linguists, seen an important development in raising the profile of linguists in the public eye. Henry Pavlovich, Chief Executive of the Institute of Linguists, described the Charter as 'a major step forward' for those in the profession, the public and everyone involved with languages. Further details about the royal charter and the individual Chartered Linguist status are available at www.iol.org.uk/about/charter.asp

Asset Languages Qualifications Will Be Available in Eight Languages in 2005/06

Asset Languages is a new voluntary assessment scheme, supporting the National Languages Strategy by providing recognition of achievement and associated accreditation options against the DfES Languages Ladder can-do statements.

Following a successful initial pilot, Asset Languages qualifications will be available nationally in Mandarin Chinese, French, German, Italian, Japanese, Panjabi, Spanish and Urdu in 2005/06. To find out more, take a look at our website at www.assetlanguages.org.uk

We are now starting work on developing Asset Languages material for the following languages:

- * Arabic
- * Bengali
- * Modern Greek
- * Gujarati
- * Hindi
- * Irish
- * Polish
- * Portuguese
- * Russian

- * Somali
- * Swedish
- * Tamil
- * Turkish
- * Yoruba
- * Welsh.

We are therefore looking for language specialists to write tasks, translate and proofread materials and to act as examiners (all on a freelance basis). Training is provided for item writing and examining. If you teach these languages and are interested in getting involved in producing new assessment materials, please request an application form from assetlanguages@ocr.org.uk or call 01223 553998.

Achievements in German Celebrated at Embassy

CILT, the National Centre for Languages would like to congratulate the five winners of the German Embassy's German Teacher Award, which recognises individual excellence and innovation in teaching German in the UK. Joe Brown, Christine Hill, James Maxwell, Katja Neubauer and Heather Watts were presented with their certificates and £750 prize money by German Ambassador, Thomas Matussek, who congratulated them on their work in 'enhancing the future prospects of many young Britons'. The British Council's Bill Musk, CILT Governor and former president of the Association for Language Learning received the German Embassy Award for his contribution to German-British relations. More details can be found at www.german-embassy.org.uk/german\_teacher\_awards\_2005.html There are 90 million native speakers of German and 50 million people learn it as a foreign language. Anyone with a good command of German and a love of football, might also be interested in the many volunteering opportunities at the World Cup 2006, see www.cilt.org.uk/promoting/index.htm#worldcup for more details.

Getting On Brilliantly: A Training Day for Leaders and Managers Who Want to Do Things Differently

- How can we lead our teams and organisations so that everyone feels involved and energetic?
- What are the best ways to encourage collaboration and partnership?

Healthy and balanced organisations are ones where leadership is courageous, the vision for the future clear and everyone can contribute to improving results. This one-day event will expand your leadership and management skills and confidence. You will learn new ways of leading groups that are efficient, effective and energising. We will try out, and discuss, methods used in the most creative and innovative of organisations in the corporate world. If you are a manager, team leader or considering moving into a leadership role don't miss this opportunity....

The training course is for people who want to be innovative leaders, for managers, for course team leaders for anyone who wants to develop their facilitation skills and transform their meetings.

Spanish Theatre Programme Wins Award

An innovative Bristol University course that encourages students to take to the stage to improve their Spanish has won a prestigious award from the CiLT, the National Centre for Languages. The CiLT 2005 European Awards for Languages are given in recognition of innovative work in improving the quality of European language learning and teaching.

The award in the category for achievement in Higher Education has been awarded to Rogelio Vallejo, Senior Language Tutor in the University's Department of Hispanic, Portuguese and Latin American Studies for his pioneering work in developing a unique course entitled Language Through Theatre. This eighteen-week Spanish-medium programme involves workshops and literary analysis in addition to a theatrical performance. Students on the course fulfil a variety of roles from learning lines and performing to research, fundraising and marketing, set building and costume-making.

The European Award for Languages judges said: The project underlines the primacy of creativity rather than resources, resulting in workshops and productions of obvious inventiveness, where a full range of skills beyond the target language are developed and encouraged. There are strong links with the local Spanish-speaking and theatre communities.

Rogelio Vallejo said: This recognition by professionals means a great deal to me. It reflects on the encouragement and support from colleagues and will give satisfaction to my students past, present and future. It's an inspiration for those prepared to experiment in delivering soundly based enjoyable language learning.

Winners will receive their Award from CiLT patron, Sir Trevor McDonald, at a prize-giving ceremony at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on the European Day of Languages (26 September). Roger Vallejo is also on the shortlist for the annual Mary Glasgow Languages Trust Award, established in memory of Mary Glasgow, first Secretary General of the Arts Council of Great Britain. This year's winner will be announced in London in September.

Please visit <http://www.bris.ac.uk/news/2005/772> for further details.

The Department of Hispanic, Portuguese and Latin American Studies is one of the most popular and successful of its kind in Britain and emerges well from both teaching and research quality official assessments. It has 400 undergraduate students, specialising in Hispanic, Portuguese and Catalan languages and cultures, often in combination with other disciplines. The Language Through Theatre course is one of a wide variety of second year study options.

<http://www.bris.ac.uk/Depts/Hispanic/default.html>

CiLT, the National Centre for Languages, is a Europe-wide initiative, supported by the European Commission. It has been recognising innovative language projects across Europe since 1999.

Generally, award-winning projects are duplicable and must show that they can provide a source of inspiration for others in different languages and cultural contexts. The general aim is to prove that creative thinking can lead to improved teaching and student achievement.

Rogelio Vallejo was born in Asuncion, Paraguay and came to the UK over thirty years ago. He was educated here, Paraguay and in Argentina. In order to travel through Europe he worked variously as a hotel receptionist in Ravenna, designing kitchens in Rochdale in the UK and as sub-postmaster of Dolwyddelan, in Snowdonia, before joining this department as a mature student. Here he revived a dormant tradition of student productions of theatre in Spanish. Upon graduation, he was appointed Language Teaching Assistant, eventually becoming Senior Language Tutor and Coordinator of Language Teaching Programmes. He developed the Language Through Theatre course from work and interests he had continued since his student productions. The course has been running for 5 years and has involved collaborations with writers, performers and distinguished academics from across the Hispanic and Lusophone world. Students speak highly of it and commentators have remarked, not simply on improvements in students' language skills, the sophistication of resulting workshops and productions, but also on the wide range of transferable skills which it enables.

<http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/uk/4151730.stm>

Britain's economic future will be "compromised" unless more students study science and foreign languages, the director general of the CBI fears. See above URL for full story.

CILT Response to CBI Statement on Languages

Isabella Moore, Director of CILT, the National Centre for Languages and former President of the British Chambers of Commerce has welcomed Sir Digby Jones' recent statement on the importance of languages for the UK economy.

'This is a long overdue acknowledgement from British business that language skills matter, as an important element of competitiveness for the country and for the regions. Our research shows that companies who are proactive in developing language skills can increase their export turnover dramatically. As all businesses know it is much more cost effective to obtain new contracts from existing customers, and that can only be achieved by developing relationships. With overseas customers, that means the ability to communicate with them in their own language.'

In relation to which languages were most needed, Mrs Moore said,

'Our current largest non-English speaking markets are Germany and France and German is widely used as a lingua franca in Central and Eastern Europe: there is no question of the ongoing need for both German and French. But we also need to look beyond Europe, and develop competence in languages which can help us penetrate new markets where there is potential for growth and little English spoken.'

In relation to this week's A level figures which are expected to show a further decline in the number of students taking French and German, Mrs Moore said:

'There is a need to demonstrate to students, their parents and their teachers, the absolute relevance of languages in today's international economy. Our young people should be able to compete on a level playing field and that means having the necessary language skills to work and succeed in complex multilingual and multicultural environments.'

She pointed to two CILT projects, funded by the DfES which are supporting increased language capabilities:

- Languages Work, launched in September 2004, is already showing evidence of success: at Lady Manners School in Bakewell (East Midlands) the French AS group increased from 4 to 20 this year, while numbers for German rose from just one to 11 as a result of using the Languages Work material.
- Similarly, a successful pilot programme in the South West this year - 'Business Language Champions' - is showing how education and business can work together to promote a better match of supply and demand in languages.

Making Knowledge Work International Conference
Building Sustainable Communities through Partnerships in: Place Management, Social Capital and Lifelong Learning (PASCAL)

Tuesday 25 to Friday 28 October 2005, Stirling, Scotland

This third international conference to be hosted by the PASCAL Observatory provides an opportunity for all with an interest in policy and programme development to share their knowledge and experiences in policy-making, community-building, regeneration and sustainability projects with others from a wide range of fields at local, regional, national and international level.

The conference aims to examine the implications for policy and practice of contemporary research in different models of place management, the role of social capital and the development of learning regions, and to raise fresh questions from practice for further research. Parallel sessions of presented papers, demonstration projects which illustrate good practice, and roundtable discussions will allow for debate and discussion on a range of topics within the broad themes of Place Management, Social Capital and Learning Regions. This international, residential conference will be relevant to Public policy-makers and managers, community development leaders, academic researchers, stakeholders and partners from all sectors working in the fields of place management, social capital and lifelong learning.
